THE TAYLORSTOWN OIL FIELD.

The Boom Throughout West Virginia.
New Enterprises Springing Up Everywhere—What is Doing in the Wheeling Mills.

The oil excitement in the Taylorstown district is on the increase and derricks are being erected in all directions. All incoming wells are proving paying investments, and the majority can be classified as "gilt edged" producers. In July, 1888, the original well on the Taylorstown field was drilled in on the John McManus farm. She was owned by the Natural Gas Company of West Virginia and proved a paying well. The Taylorstown field was then owned by the John McManus and Forest Company, but bought in the J. Cundall and Jim Noble No. 1, both of which flowed over 200 barrels in twenty-two hours. Developments were made on the San Juan, Sun, Blaney, Donahue, Flack, Hodges, Jim McManus, Bill Crothers and Robert Noble farms, all of which came in good territory. The aforesaid companies then consolidated under the style of the Washington Oil Company, and on November 1 was in the great shut down movement which lasted one year. No new wells were drilled and all producing wells were shut in. It was not until January, 1888, when Joe Preston and Joe Elsworth, two young men, leased a tract of land in the Taylorstown field, and drilled a well which flowed twenty-four acres that adjoins the village of Taylorstown. They have invested their last dollar.

This place is almost due south from the original McManus and was considered no good by the knowing ones. Nevertheless the Joe-Joe Oil Company struck a good producer of two hundred and thirty barrels a day, and it is still a good well. These young men, emboldened by their success, leased the John Thompson farm, northeast of their hill and a half mile distant, and here started another wild cat. This, it was predicted, would be worthless, and the boys were deemed fools for going into a section that would not be touched by the large companies. Nevertheless their venture proved a grand success and a one hundred and sixty-barrel well crowned their efforts.

The excitement then was intense. Producers flocked in from all directions and the adjoining farms were held at a premium. The Robert Knox and William Knox farms adjoin this, as also the Hagerty Brothers. The Joe-Joe, however, held the latter. These farms now have thirty-two producing wells and are yielding from 100 to 150 barrels a day. The developments continued north and south, and first-class wells have been found on the Houston, Kitchey, Henderson, Hill, Crothers, Thompson and other farms. The Taylorstown field is now a half mile track for their stock. Hilton has purchased and paid cash for a fine farm, and oil developments are again near his new venture. Tommy is quite lucky, as his little twenty-four acre plot was mortgaged and a decree of sale issued before his first well was brought in, and only a few years ago the outside made the party holding the lien hold off until the well was in.

The Taylorstown oil field is all within the bounds of the Taylorstown, and is now composed of 103 producing wells, and about 100 under process of development and many new rigs building daily. The Blaney lease trouble still continues, the Washington Oil Company still holding possession. Trouble, however, is looked for, as bets have been made that the bushwhackers will not be allowed to cut their Eastern eyes on the lease of the Taylorstown field, and it will take quite an army to route them.

Blaney has served an injunction on the Washington Oil Company, and they are now proceeding to drill No. 4 well on the farm. This, however, will not amount to much, as they will give bonds for damages and continue.

The Higham syndicate, of which Villinger is having trouble. A string of tools dropped has caused a fishing job for the last two weeks and probably the big well will be moved. The Grimes well, near the Taylorstown field, has been fishing for the past three weeks.

The Washington Company have alone some seventy producing wells and about half that number of derricks. The territory is now divided into two districts. John Rumbaugh, the former superintendent, having charge of one-half, and Scott Thompson, formerly superintendent of the Taylorstown field, having charge of the other. The latter is now seeing the balance. The latter will, according to the John McManus residence, recently purchased by the Washington Company.

Several fights have occurred within the last week, regular oil-timers, and as Taylorstown has had the regular murder that must occur before a town can be classed as a regular oil town.

Five teams were fined for hauling a boiler on the Sabbath day last week.

FROM THE ROOM LAND.

People Who Do Not take Much Stock in the Oil Excitement.

M. E. Morris, formerly of Martin's Ferry, who has been at Findlay six weeks, returned yesterday. He is satisfied with Martin's Ferry and says he would not give it for Findlay. He thinks Findlay will not amount to much after this summer, and says he can't live in a town where it is so swampy that masons and carpenters are obliged to wear gum boots when building houses, and people chew quinine by the spoonful. The millions of dollars spent in draining the land of natural gas boom and wind, has not improved the condition as many think it has.

Thomas Shelly, of the "Kina Glass Works, Bazaar, does not think much of the gas boom. He says he has seen and turned from Findlay and other towns near there. There is a strong probability of a long shut down in this vicinity.
